

SUMMARY BIOGRAPHICAL INFORMATION
DAMIAN PEKO

Damian Peko serves as a Nuclear Engineer and Senior Advisor in the Office of International Nuclear Energy Policy and Cooperation

Currently Mr. Peko is serving in the Office for Nuclear Energy's Office of International Nuclear Energy Policy and Cooperation where he is responsible for engagement with Japan on Post-Fukushima Daiichi issues and supports engagement with Ukraine. Within the Office of Nuclear Energy Mr. Peko has served as Program Manager for Reactor Technologies Research and Development in Office of Light Water Reactor Technologies and served as Associate Deputy Assistant Secretary for Corporate and Global Partnership Development.

Mr. Peko served as Director for Civil Nuclear Energy Operations, Tokyo where he represented the Office of Nuclear Energy and supported U.S. Government objectives on nuclear energy program and policy issues with the Japanese Government and Japanese commercial nuclear industry.

Mr. Peko also served in the United State Department of State in the Foreign Service, in Rockwell International Corporation's Rocketdyne Division and in the United States Navy within the Division of Naval Reactors.

Mr. Peko holds a Master's Degree in Systems Engineering from John Hopkins University and a Bachelor's Degree in Nuclear Engineering from the Pennsylvania State University and obtained a certificate in Naval Nuclear Propulsion Engineering from the Bettis Reactor Engineering School.